

Airborne Public Safety Association (APSA) has officially launched

For Immediate Release

Frederick, MD – Jan. 2, 2018 – The Airborne Public Safety Association is excited to announce the official launch of its new association branding and website, publicsafetyaviation.org. APSA is pleased to include Fire Service, SAR, EMS, Natural Resources, Public Utilities, Emergency Management and the providers of goods and services to these segments of the industry, while continuing our long-standing relationship with law enforcement aviation. The new name better aligns with the future of the association and broadens our continued commitment to the industry.

ALEA has been a leader in the public safety aviation training and education for nearly fifty years, said Dan Schwarzbach, APSA’s Executive Director and CEO. “We have rebranded our name to APSA to better define our presence in the public safety arena. Our new name and business model signify that we will continue to be a viable asset in educating and supporting all members in the public safety aviation sectors.”

About the Airborne Public Safety Association

The Airborne Public Safety Association’s (APSA) mission is to support, promote and advance the safe and effective utilization of aircraft by governmental agencies in support of public safety missions through training, networking, advocacy and educational programs.
