Seeker Aircraft, Inc. Announces Partnership with South American Aircraft Dealership, KAHA Aviation Solutions

Surveillance aircraft company expands into new market in South America

(Albuquerque, N.M.) Seeker Aircraft, Inc. has announced that the Seeker, a one-of-a-kind, purpose built light observation aircraft specifically designed and developed for surveillance missions, will now be available for purchase from aircraft dealer KAHA Aviation Solutions in Buenos Aires, Argentina. This partnership marks the first expansion into South America for Seeker Aircraft.

“Bringing on KAHA Aviation Solutions as an official Seeker dealership is a major step in expanding our sales efforts into South America,” said Ed Lundeen, President of Seeker Aircraft. “We are pleased to have formalized this relationship, knowing that KAHA’s dedication to providing the best in innovative special mission aircraft is a perfect match for marketing the unique and highly-specialized qualities of the Seeker.”

KAHA Aviation Solutions seeks to represent products with unique features in the market that make operations more efficient and less expensive. Already offering a series of innovative aircraft for a diverse range of missions requiring specialty aircraft, KAHA’s addition of the Seeker will provide a solution to those looking for a surveillance specific aircraft.

Pablo Bottacchi, General Manager of KAHA stated, “We are extremely pleased to join the Seeker distribution team. The Seeker is ideal for those in our territory that require affordability, durability, versatility and a superior flight experience. We look forward to a long and successful relationship with Seeker Aircraft.”
